

Contents

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction 1

1. The Modernist Soundscape: Ocularcentrism and Auditory Technologies 16
2. Music and the Prosody of Voice: Dorothy Richardson and the Transformation from Silent Film to the Talkie 37
3. Recording the Soundscape: Virginia Woolf's Onomatopoeia and the Phonograph 66
4. Turning Up the Volume of Inner Speech: Headphones and James Joyce's Interior Monologue 94
5. Inner Speech as a Gramophone Record: Jean Rhys's Bohemian Voice and Popular Music 114
6. Turning Words into Sounds: Samuel Beckett's Repetition and the Tape Recorder 141

Afterword 162

Notes 165

Works Cited 175

Index 189