

Contents

Foreword to the English Edition of Rómulo histórico	xvii
Author's Preface to the English Translation	xxi
A Preliminary Observation	xxi
Prologue from the Third Edition	xxiii
Author's Notes	xxiv
First Note	xxiv
Second Note	xxv
Third Note	xxv
Fourth Note	xxv
Translator's Note	xxvii
Basic Glossary	xxxi
Introductory Essay	1
1. The Initial Framework for Rómulo Betancourt's Historical Personality	13
Rómulo Betancourt's Personality Placed within Its Historical Context	13
Venezuelan Historical Time	14
International Historical Time	15
The Broad Ideological-Political Setting	15
The Sociohistorical Context of Rómulo Betancourt's Early Ideology and Historical Actions	16
The National Sociohistorical Context	16
The Direct Contact with the National Sociohistorical Context	18
The Sociohistorical Context of Latin America and the World	19
2. The Early Education of Rómulo Betancourt as a Political Militant: Circumstances and Factors that Shaped His Basic Historical Personality	21
The Interaction among the Initial Conditions within which Rómulo Betancourt Had to Develop	22

The Proposals and Personal Resolutions From the Classical Maxim of Mastering Oneself	23
Critical Self-Evaluation	25
Rómulo Betancourt's Tempered Ethical and Moral Character	27
Taking Stock of His Personal Failings and Deficits of Intellect and Doctrine	28
Insertion of Rómulo Betancourt into the New Political, Social, and Scientific Environment	29
Recognition and Confession of Shortcomings. Breaking through the Ideological Barriers of Tradition and Dictatorship	30
Development of an Ideological, Cultural, and Revolutionary Self-Study Plan	33
Cultivation of a Critical Spirit and Historical Understanding	35
The Sustained Ideological Maturation of a Militant Revolutionary	35
From Vehement Garibaldism to Revolutionary Marxist-Leninist Militancy	36
Rómulo Betancourt's Position with Respect to Rising Leninism-Stalinism	37
Admiration for the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics	38
Critical Rejection of the Third Communist International	39
Rómulo Betancourt's Trotskyism	40
Opinion of Stalin	42
Antitotalitarian and Antifascist Position	42
Anti-Imperialist Militancy	43
Rómulo Betancourt's Evolution toward Social Democracy	43
3. Rise of a Marxist Revolutionary Leader: Groundwork for a Theory of the Democratic Venezuelan Revolution	46
Preparing for Leadership during the First Exile (1928–1936)	46
The Hermanitos	47
The Drastic Break with Entrenched Caudillos	48
Ideological and Political Battles with Exiled Militant Communist Revolutionary Colleagues	48
Rómulo Betancourt Mounts a Democratic International	49
Drafting a Political Strategy in Exile	50
The Intended Audience of the New Revolutionary Message	50
The Nature of the New Political Rhetoric	51
Spreading the Message: Means, Language, and Content	51
The New Effective Rhetoric for the Venezuelan Sociopolitical Situation in Exile and in Country	52

Proposals for a Political Strategy	53
The Promotion of a National Political and Social Consciousness	54
Replacing the Traditional Revolutionary Manifesto and the Leninist-Stalinist Internationale: The Barranquilla Plan	54
The Circumstances Surrounding the Emerging Leadership	57
4. Toward a Venezuelan Revolutionary Theory of Democracy	58
Playing a Fundamental Role on the Sociopolitical Stage	58
The Partial Eclipse of the Barranquilla Plan and its Minimal Program?	59
The Influence of the Escalation of the European War into a World War on the Partial Eclipse of the Barranquilla Plan	60
Rómulo Betancourt's Apprenticeship on the Venezuelan Scene	60
Rómulo Betancourt's Sociopolitical Readjustment on Returning from His First Exile in 1936	61
Primary Exploration and the Initial Understanding of the Sociospatial Landscape	62
A Rising Leader on the Way to Elected Office	63
Proof of the Governmental and Administrative Inefficiency of the Liberal Regionalist Dictatorship in its Final Phase	64
Rómulo Betancourt's Entrance and Participation in Emerging Political Life	64
The Seeds of the First National Modern Political Party of the Masses	65
Overcoming Traditional Regionalism by Promoting a National Party of the Masses	65
Rómulo Betancourt Outgrows His Initial Communist Militancy	66
The Latin American Scene	67
The First Phase of Latin American Internationalism	68
The Second Phase of Latin American Internationalism	69
The Third Phase of Latin Americanist Internationalism	70
The Latin American Internationalism of Rómulo Betancourt and the Role of the United States	71
5. Revising Venezuelan Democratic Aspirations in the Context of the Repercussions of the Second World War	73
Venezuela in the Face of an Initially European War	74
Rómulo Betancourt's Changing Interpretation of the European War	75
The Governmental Lack of Foresight in the Face of the Inevitable Consequences of the European War	76

The Effects of the Full Participation of the United States in the Formerly European War	77
Venezuela Joins the World War	77
Venezuela's Structural Crisis	78
The Endemic Subsistence Crisis	78
The Regime's Inability to Address the Structural Crisis	79
The Direct Political Consequences of Venezuela's Role in the Great Battlefield of Democracy Against Fascism	80
The Decisive Effect of the Second World War on the Regime's Tolerance for Civil Rights	80
The Installation of a Liberal Democratic Regime as a Legacy of the Second World War	81
The Significance of the Doctrine of the Four Freedoms and the Atlantic Charter	82
The Principle of Self-Determination of Peoples and the Political and Economic Validation of National Sovereignty	82
The Reassessment of Anti-Imperialism and the Eradication of Colonialism in America	84
New Directions for Foreign Policy in the Postwar Period	84
The Participation of Venezuela and Latin America in Postwar Negotiations	85
6. The Strategy to Launch the Democratic Revolution	87
The Ideological and Political Repercussions of the Second World War on Rómulo Betancourt's Leadership	87
Proposals for the Formation of Public Power and the Democratic Process	88
The Modernization of the Democratic Process	90
Modern Proposals for the Purpose of Public Power	93
Modernizing Political Life	95
Overcoming the Sociopolitical Autocratic Regime of 1830 after the Collapse of the Republic of Colombia	95
The Establishment of a Democracy of Political Parties	98
The Modern Redefinition of Public Office	100
Ideas for the Postwar Republic	103
National Consequences of the Postwar Period	103
The Participation of Venezuela and Latin America in International Postwar Decisions	105
The Future of Foreign Trade and Oil at the Beginning of the Cold War	106

7. The Design and Institutionalization of the First Liberal Democratic Republic of Venezuela	108
The Establishment of the Liberal Democratic Republic: The Emergence of the Statesman Rómulo Betancourt and the Consolidation of His Political Leadership	109
The Sociopolitical Rationale for the Liberal Democratic Republic	109
The Democratic Concept of the Formation, Exercise, and Purpose of Public Power	113
The Definition and Consolidation of the Sociopolitical Foundations of Public Power	114
Consolidating Public Power	116
The Consolidation of Public Power as a Means and an End toward Genuine Democracy	116
The Candidates in the Presidential Election of 1945	118
The Exercise of Public Power	120
A Necessary Referendum on the Exercise of Public Power	120
Drafting the Political Objectives of the State	124
Guidelines for a Democratic Society	125
The Government Response to the Negative Postwar Repercussions	127
The Purpose of Public Power	129
Social Integration	130
National Consciousness and Territorial Integration in Overcoming Territorial Isolation	132
National and Economic Integration	134
Guarantee Supplies, Combat the High Cost of Living, and Stimulate Agricultural and Livestock Growth	135
The Creation and Implementation of National Economic Institutions: The National Supply Commission, the Venezuelan Development Corporation, and the National Economic Council	135
An Integrated and Planned National Economy: The Role of the Private Sector and Foreign Investment	137
Wholesale Agrarian Reform and Basic Industrialization	140
The Broad Outlines of Foreign Policy	141
8. The Third Exile	144
Responsible Leadership	144
The Need to Grow in a New International Setting	146

A Reputation Damaged by a Political Catastrophe for Which He Was Blamed	146
Poverty and Precariousness in Exile	147
Unfruitful Attempts to Gain the Support of International Organizations	148
The Effects of Rómulo Betancourt's Criticism of the UN and OAS	148
The Promotion of Labor in Exile	150
Relations with North American Labor	150
The Confederation of Workers of Latin America and the World Labor Federation as a Possible Alliance against the Yankees	151
Consolidating and Preserving Leadership	152
Pride in the Work Accomplished and the Viability of the Liberal Democratic Regime	152
The Tactic of Optimistic Predictions	153
Changing Positions with Respect to the United States	154
A Realistic Evaluation of the Crisis of the Liberal Democratic Republic and Whether It Would Return	154
The Need to Sway North American Public Opinion	154
The Response to Negative Reactions in His Own Ranks	155
Radical Strategic and Ideological Shifts with Respect to Communists and Communism	155
The First Phase of the Strategy to Return to Power from Exile	157
International Circumstances and the Questioning of Rómulo Betancourt's Leadership	158
The Ideological Independence of the Party and the Democratic and Anticommunist Position of the Party and its President	158
Defense of the Liberal Democratic Republic as a Bastion against Soviet Communism	159
The Historical Credibility of the Acción Democrática Party	160
The Recovery of the Party and its Role in Resisting the Military Dictatorship	161
Confronting the Anti-Betancourt Movement and "Childhood Measles"	161
Joining Forces against the Military Dictatorship	162
The Plan for Strategy and Tactics	164
The Fiasco of Promoting Abstentions in 1952	165
The Political Justification of Violence: Personal Attack, a Recurrence of Garibaldism, and Democratic Interventionism?	166

The Armed Forces and the Special Work	168
The Military and the Consolidation of Public Power	170
9. The Ideological Foundations and Political Process of Reinstatement of the Liberal Democratic Republic	173
The Relationship between Rómulo Betancourt's Goals, Aptitude, and Determination	174
The Reaffirmation of Values and Celebration of Achievements	174
The Critical Selection of Coalition Allies	175
Essential Differences between Political and Ideological Positions on Communism	176
The Root Cause of the Differences: The Formation of Public Power	177
Assembling the Arsenal Needed to Return to Power	179
The Expected Conduct of the Military	180
Signs of a Coalition Government?	181
The Final Phase of the Strategy for a Return to Power	182
The Fundamental Role of the National Scene	183
Venezuela's Legitimate Resentment of United States Tolerance of the Military Dictatorship	184
From the Military Coup of January 23, 1958, to the Reinstallation of the Liberal Democratic Republic	184
Overcoming the Reticence of the US State Department	185
Guarantees for the Vital Flow of Oil	187
From an Initial and Fervent Leninist Anti-Imperialism to an Anticolonialism Based on the Atlantic Charter	189
The Dialectic of Political Unity and Ideological Autonomy	193
The Dissolution of the Patriotic Junta	193
The Resumption of the Democratic Party System	194
The Induced Self-Marginalization of the Communists that Preserved their Role in the Democratic Regime	194
The Operational Plan and Restructuring Acción Democrática	196
The Return of Militancy and the Control of the Direction of the Party	197
The Party's Cautious Public Presence	198
The Preservation and Promotion of a Policy of Interparty Unity toward a Unified Operational Policy	199
The Puntofijo Pact and the Barranquilla Plan	199
The Minimal Joint Plan of Government and the Minimal Program that Concluded the Barranquilla Plan	200
Political Repercussions of the Agreement of the Democratic Parties and their Respective Presidential Candidates	201

The Effect of the Third Exile on Romulo Betancourt's Personality as a Statesman Strategist of the Return to Power	202
Strong Leadership: Managing the Party and the Militants	202
The Ethical Cost of Defending the Restoration of the Liberal Democratic Republic	203
10. Overcoming the Direct and Indirect Repercussions of the Cold War in the Reestablishment of the Liberal Democratic Republic	205
A New, Complicated, and Volatile Scenario	205
The Rescue of the Liberal Democratic Government	206
Renewal or Revision of the Liberal Democratic Experience
Interrupted in 1948?	207
Reassessment of the October Revolution	207
Restore, Rectify, or Reformulate?	209
The New Democracy of Rómulo Betancourt	210
Experiments with a New Modality of Exercising Public Office	210
The First Phase of the Reestablishment of the Sociopolitical Liberal Democratic Regime	211
Redefining Liberal Democratic Republican Constitutionality	212
The Broadened Exercise of Popular Rule	213
The Second Phase of the Reestablishment of the Sociopolitical Liberal Democratic Regime	214
The Pact for the Exercise of Public Office	214
The Redefinition of the Role of President	215
Actors in the Process of Reestablishing the Sociopolitical Liberal Democratic Government	217
The International Scene and the Foreign Policy of the Coalition Government	219
Public Office as an Ongoing Pedagogical Tool	220
The Functioning of the Coalition Pact	221
Consensus and Dissent in the Coalition Government	221
The Permanent and Wide-Ranging Dialogue with Popular Opinion	223
The Development of the Private Sector	223
Repression During the Liberal Democratic Republic: Its Reach and Limitations	224
Repression and Legality in a Sociopolitical Liberal Democratic Regime	225
The Legal Grounds for Repression	227

A Deficient Legal Framework and the Violation of Human Rights	228
Permanent Enemies and Those Disguised as Revolutionaries	229
From Urban Insurgency to Guerrilla Action	230
The Defeat by Police, the Military, and Political Forces of the Subversive Guerrilla Movement	231
The Political Complexity of the Outcome	232
The Third Phase of the Reinstatement of the Sociopolitical Liberal Democratic Regime	235
A Necessary, but by No Means Easy, Definition of Objectives: Revolutionary Democracy or a Democratic Revolution?	235
Or, Was This a Conveniently Evolutionary Revolution?	236
Was This a Revolution to Advance to Socialism?	237
Areas of Immediate Attention as a Function of the Democratic Revolution: Drafting Democratic Revolutionary Policies	237
The Establishment of the Sociopolitical Liberal-Democratic Regime through Democratic Planning	238
Necessary Correlatives for a New Approach to the Economy	239
Putting an End to Improvisation and Confusion	239
The Urgent Fight against Unemployment	240
New Economic Policies Constrained by the Fiscal Deficit	241
Instituting a Code of Political and Administrative Responsibility	242
Bringing Public Administration into the Technological Age	242
The Economic Policies of the Reinstated Liberal Democratic Republic	243
The Position on Foreign Investment	243
Modernizing and Democratizing Relations between Workers and Employers	244
Influencing Society in Favor of Comprehensive Agrarian Reform and Industrialization	246
Rómulo Betancourt, Constitutional President: The Continuity in His Political Evolution	248
A Politics of Principles: From Democratic Political Leader to Statesman and Revolutionary Democratic Leader	249
The Use and Abuse of History	250
The International Visibility of Rómulo Betancourt, Constitutional President of the Republic	250
A Test Case: Cuba	251

11. The Overall Assessment of the Installation and Consolidation of the Socio-Political Liberal Democratic Regime in Venezuela: 1945–1964	253
The New Concept of Public Power, the State, and the Government	255
The Emancipation of a Patronage Society	256
The Proposals for and Practice of the Renovation of Forms of Access to Public Power	256
The Meaning and Reach of the Right to Universal Suffrage	257
The Combination of Forms, Traditional and New, of Access to Public Power and its Legitimization	258
The Practice of the Pedagogical Conception of the Exercise of Public Power	259
Modern Democracy, the Source and Guarantor of Freedom	259
The Liberal Democratic Rationale for Public Power	259
Modern Democracy, the Guarantor of Citizenship	261
The Procedures of Modern Democracy as Guarantors of the Exercise of Citizenship	262
The Organic Relationship between the March toward Democracy and Citizen Participation	263
The Exercise of Public Power as Founded on the Binomial Legality-Legitimacy and on Exemplary Ethics	264
The Transparency of Government Conduct	265
The Separation of the Institutions Exercising Public Power	265
Democracy, Political and Economic Development, and the Well-Being of Society	267
The New Economy as Necessary Foundation for the Liberal Democratic Republic	267
The Role of the Oil Industry in the New Economy	268
The Role of the Interaction between Comprehensive Agrarian Reform and Industrialization	270
The Realistic Incorporation of the Oil Industry into the Diversified National Economy	272
State and Government as Direct Expressions of the Citizenry	274
The Rigorous Observance of the New Ethical Coordinates of Public Power	275
The Statesman Rómulo Betancourt on the New National Scene	277
New Spatial Dimensions for the Exercise of Public Power	277
The Ideological Dimensions of Liberal Democratic Coalition Politics	278

The Functioning of the [Presidentialist?] Coalition Government	280
The Political Rationale for the Need for a Coalition Government	282
The Reestablishment of the Liberal Democratic Regime	284
A Revolution: Democratic or Evolving?	287
The Concept of Revolution Coined by Rómulo Betancourt: Methodological Criteria	287
Creative Concurrence or Collaboration?	289
A Revolutionary Emulsion of Sociohistorical Realism, Political Pragmatism, and Theoretical Creativity	290
The Use of the Concept of Revolution by Rómulo Betancourt	291
The Anti-Imperialist Democratic Revolution	292
The Democratic Revolution as a True Revolution	294
More on the Aims of the Evolutionary Revolution?	294
Conditions Adverse to the Pursuit of the Objectives of the Democratic or Evolutionary Revolution	296
Preparing the Way for the Arrival of Modern Capitalism	296
The Continuity and Evolution of Rómulo Betancourt's Concept of Imperialism	297
Learned Imperialism and Observed Imperialism	297
His First Direct Contact with Imperialism in Venezuela and His Pragmatic Evolution	298
Democracy as a Requirement for Socioeconomic Development	299
The Foundation of the Liberal Democratic Republic and the Transformation of Society	300
An Exemplary Agent of Social Change	300
12. Rómulo Betancourt in History: The Historiographical Reckoning and His Own Assessment	302
Rómulo Betancourt's Historical Legacy as Leader, Executive, and Statesman	303
The Projection of Rómulo Betancourt's Historical Personality	321
The Impact of Rómulo Betancourt's Sociopolitical Work	327
Rómulo Betancourt's Historical Personality as Seen by Himself: Venezuela, Politics, and Oil	335
History as Action	336
I Must Proceed with History as a Passion	342
Conclusions	352
Addenda to the Third Edition	357

First Addendum 357

From Sowing Oil to Sowing a Nation: Lecture Delivered in the Arturo Uslar Pietri Auditorium of the Universidad Metropolitana, Caracas, February 24, 2016 357

Second Addendum 364

On the Political Thought of Rómulo Betancourt: “Democracy and Development”; Lecture Given at the Universidad Rafael Urdaneta, Maracaibo, March 10, 2016 364

Third Addendum 372

Rómulo Betancourt’s Venezuelan Social Democracy: Lecture Sponsored by the Friedrich Ebert Stiftung Latin American Institute for Social Research, The Rómulo Betancourt Foundation, June 4, 2016 372

Fourth Addendum 395

Rómulo Betancourt and the Historical Man (Correspondence) 395
Rómulo Betancourt to Germán Carrera Damas, March 19, 1975 396

Carrera Damas to Betancourt, April 3, 1975 396

Carrera Damas to Betancourt, July 7, 1975 397

Betancourt to Carrera Damas, July 14, 1975 398

Carrera Damas to Betancourt, September 9, 1975 398

Betancourt to Carrera Damas, January 18, 1979 399