Contents

List of Figures   vii
List of Tables   ix
Acknowledgments  xi
1. Food, Archaeology, and African American Identity   1
2. Situating the Maynard and Burgess Families   4
3. Excavating the “Other Annapolis”   30
4. The Foods They Ate   49
5. Food as Community: Maynard and Burgess Food Habits in Regional Contexts   73
6. African Americans and Consumption   91
7. In the “Side Room”: Eating with the Maynards and the Burgesses   109
8. Conclusions: Meals and Their Legacies   130
  Appendix A. Bones Recovered from Wet Screen Samples   133
  Appendix B. Summary of Comparative Faunal Data   137
References   159
Index   181