

adopted without Meaning, and eccho'd out amongst the People to inflame and abuse them?<sup>26</sup>

Q. II. If the Ministry had taken no Steps towards a Peace, and had proceeded to the War with Spain before they had ever attempted to treat, Whether their Enemies could have wish'd a more popular Cry against them?

Q. III. Whether it is not both the Interest and Study of the Minority, and the Instruments which they employ, to blacken the Administration at all Hazards, both for doing or not doing the same Thing?

Q. IV. If the Triennial Bill had stood its Ground when Mr Turner voted for the Repeal of it, whether the Triennial Commotions of the Populace consequent upon it, would not have favour'd the Designs of the Enemies to the Hanover Succession, and thereby have given new Hopes and Vigour to the Spirit of Jacobitism?<sup>27</sup>

Q. V. Whether Numbers of the Tories did not vote against the Repeal of that Bill upon that very Motive?

Q. VI. Whether most, if not all, the Gentlemen in the Opposition, however changed, did not actually vote for the Repeal of it?<sup>28</sup>

Q. VII. Whether Mr Turner in voting against the Repeal of the Septennial Bill, did any Thing more than act consistently with Himself?<sup>29</sup>

Q. VIII. Whether the Whigs maintain a numerous standing Army, does not intend such an Army as is necessary to check the Fury of the People spirited up to any Excess by Party-Artifices and false Clamours?<sup>30</sup>

Q. IX. Whether Mr Turner was ever for any Vote of Credit which was not absolutely necessary for the Safety and Honour of his Country?

Q. X. Whether Mr Turner's Service and Regard for the Sailors was ever made a Query of before?<sup>31</sup>

Q. XI. Whether the Leading Men of that Party which brought in the Place-Bill, secretly wish'd it any Success? or whether They did not bring it in, on Purpose to throw it out, to reinforce their defeated Cause with a Topic for Declamation at the approaching General Election?<sup>32</sup>

Q. XII. Whether a Majority of those Gentlemen did not wish in their Hearts for the very Places against which They affected to vote?<sup>33</sup>

Q. XIII. Whether Mr Fox's Tenants upon his fine Estate in Ireland, will not be enabled to make him both greater and more punctual Remittances, on Condition that they be permitted to sell their Wooll to France? If so,